Working with a Host-Based IDS

A Host Intrusion Detection System (HIDS) is designed to detect hacker attacks on a single computer system. HIDS software is installed on each host that needs IDS capabilities.

Because the HIDS is installed on the local computer, the computer is completely compromised once a hacker penetrates the HIDS software.

HIDS can monitor:

- Network traffic specific to the host
- Checksums of important system files
- Ports used by the system or incoming connections
- Processes running on the system

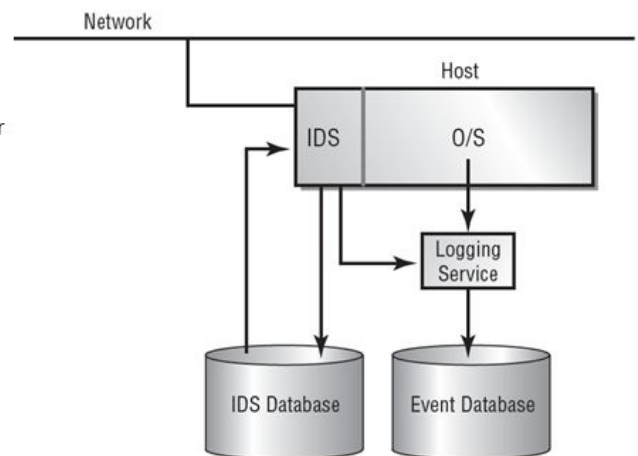

HIDS can include filters and antivirus modules.

HIDSs are good at detecting unauthorized file modifications and user activity.

- HIDS runs on a host in the network to:
- Monitor communications
- Monitor system logs and file systems
- Detect suspicious activities, including failed login attempts

A host-based IDS cannot see information within encrypted tunnels.

To monitor the internal network and external traffic the NIDSs and HIDSs should be used together.
